

There are far too many intrusions into the personal lives by businesses already. Many restrooms even have advertising in them. Please allow our homes to be the place where businesses CANNOT enter without our permission by doing nothing that would change the "no-call" status that Indiana has provided the residents of the state. Even broadcasters must follow the creed of "Public Interest, Convenience, and Necessity." Allowing telephone solicitations do not serve any form of the PIRATE rule that is the basis of broadcasters, so how could it be good for other form of communication? Let the FCC return to it's roots of protecting the people, not the businesses.
